

SOLDIER BOYS EASILY DEFEAT DESHA'S OUTFIT

FRANCIS BARNEY IS DRIVEN FROM BOX WHILE WILLIE
WILLIAMS DOES BUT LITTLE BETTER—
LAWSON IS ALSO WILD.

(From Monday Advertiser.)

It was a wild and woolly ball game the All-Service and Oahu dished up to the fans at Athletic Park yesterday afternoon, and the battle was no more like the ball game of a week ago than is black like white. Both teams seemed to be suffering from a very tired feeling and after the first inning the umpire and fans felt likewise and it was four minutes past five o'clock when all hands got the chance to sleep.

Captain Hixenbaugh's team repeated just as easy as on the previous Sunday despite the fact that Dave Desha had Henry Bushnell, Laag Akana, Frank La Mere and Lai Tin in his lineup. Both Francis Barney Joy and Johnny Williams' little brother Willie, were away from the All-Service crew and eleven hits netted the soldier boys ten runs. Lawson, too, was easy for the Oahu and eight hits netted the Oahu seven runs and but for Willie going to the relief of Lawson the story might have been different. As that the support given the four pitchers was of the bush variety and many of those hits and runs came after the side should have been retired.

Barney Is Easy.
The All-Service outfit were the first to dent the rubber, sending two runs over in the first inning on three hits, a fielder's choice and an infield out. Oahu tied this in their half of the round on three hits and an error by Leftfielder Mason.

In the third, Barney was bumped again and two more soldiers romped over the pan. The fourth was blank for Captain Hixenbaugh's gang but Francis B. was wobbling and Dave Desha concluded to chase the Duck King and substitute Billy Williams. Billy started well for the soldiers for two doubles, a single and Billy's error gave them two more runs.

Oahu Go to Front.
In the fourth the Oahu tied the score with two runs on some great and wonderful bobbing on the part of Lawson in particular and an error by Benowski in centerfield. With the wind-up of the seventh the Oahu were out in front when they scored three runs and sent Lawson to the clubhouse, something which greatly pleased the fans.

fans, for Lawson was as slow as molasses running up hill and had no more ambition than a government mule. The Oahu did not hold this lead though for two hits, some wild and woolly pitching and a couple of bushy errors in the ninth gave the All-Service team four runs.

This brought their total up to ten, three more than the Oahu had when the last of Desha's men went out in the last of the ninth. Following is the score:

Mere Youth Hits Above .300 Mark for Four Years Straight with Connie Mack's Team.

(From Monday Advertiser.)

Few fans are aware of the splendid batting record made by Stuffy McInnis, the youthful first-sacker of the Philadelphia Athletics, during his career in the American League. Stuffy has been a major league ball player only a few years, joining the Athletics first as sub-infielder, playing short mainly, and then as regular first baseman stepping into the place made vacant by Harry Davis when he left to manage the Cleveland Naps.

McInnis is hardly out of his teens, being twenty-three years of age last September, and this sturdy youth, who hails from Gloucester, Massachusetts, has batted over .300 during the last four years. The point in Stuffy's remarkable whaling career is that he has accomplished in a few years what many major league stars have failed to do in ten to fifteen years.

Stuffy joined the Mackmen in the spring of 1909 as utility man, or, it should be said, boy, for he was not quite nineteen then. An accident to "Hommer" Baker, who was spiked by Sherwood Magee in the spring series with the Philadelphia Nationals, gave McInnis the chance of cover short in the first game of ball ever played at Shibe Park.

It was asking a great deal of a raw eighteen-year-old juvenile to make his debut not only on the opening day of the season, but a day when America's first grandstand draught was to be dedicated. There were all sorts of side-line exercises that day which were enough to throw a veteran off his balance, but McInnis, ordered into action on a moment's notice, gave an inkling of what a gritty batter he was going to be by playing brilliantly in all departments.

He went to third base, while the famed Nichols resumed his old post at short. But Mack, who saw Stuffy under fire and knew he had a kolobur in the midst. During this year McInnis played in nineteen games and batted .329, the only season in the majors that he did not hit above the .300 mark.

In 1910 Stuffy was continued as a substitute infielder, taking part in thirty-eight games and batting .331 for the season. This was sufficient for Mack, who had been closely watching the boy, and as soon as Harry Davis, who was rapidly passing his useful period, resigned in order to manage the Naps, Connie immediately promoted McInnis to first base, and there he has stuck ever since. Not a season has rolled by in which the graduate of the fishing industry in and about Gloucester has failed to larnup the horsehide to all corners of the field for a mark better than .300. For instance, in 1911 he batted .323; in 1912 he raised this to .327, and last year was barely below with the splendid mark of .326. His complete record gives him four years as a .300 per cent walloper out of a career of five seasons. Guess that isn't some record.

Compare McInnis' record with Joe Tucker, who started in 1902, and who has batted .300 only once in his big league career, or with a dozen others, and it is plain that he has had on the hitting prowess of this youth. This would also seem to indicate that one can indicate on the fingers of one hand those players who are in Stuffy's class for steadyness with the stick. As the youth has not yet turned twenty-four, he should further enhance his reputation for being a phenomenal swatster.

The San Francisco Seals may have another catcher and a good one, too. But in the process they will lose a pitcher. Orval Overall, the famous Cub moundman, and later with the home team, has his doubts about "coming back" as a twirler, according to inside information coming from Los Angeles yesterday. He is so much in love with the game, however, he aspires to don the mask, chest protector and shin guards, and with the mammoth pillow on his left hand, will try to win as much applause behind the log as he did in former years when on the delivery end of the battery. "Big Jeff" is a natural ball player, as was shown when alternating with Willie Williams he would sometimes pitch and sometimes watch on the University of California team, and is a good stickler. In twenty games with the Seals last season he had a batting average of .245, which is going some for a pitcher.

BILL MAY AND COLLEGE OF HAWAII

Professor Vaughan MacCaughy Hopes to Secure Some of Befits of Appropriation Bill in Congress.

Through Prof. Vaughan MacCaughy of the College of Hawaii and the National Bureau of Education at Washington, the claims of the local school for a share of the appropriation provided for "state colleges of agriculture and mechanic arts" in the Lever Agricultural Extension Bill have been placed before the department of agriculture for consideration. Speaking of the claims of the College of Hawaii on any appropriations made in the bill, Prof. MacCaughy said:

"Among other things the bill provides for a fixed appropriation from the federal treasury of $10,000 per year unconditionally to every State. It further provides conditional appropriations, beginning with $30,000 a year to be pro rated among the states on the basis of rural population. This appropriation increases every year by the sum of $300,000 until a maximum of $2,000,000 is reached. No State will receive its pro rata of this sum until it appropriates an equal amount for the same purpose. The money goes to and is expended by the State College of Agriculture in each State. You will note that this bill would give Hawaii, unconditionally, ten thousand dollars per year, and a pro rata increase dependent upon local appropriations.

Provisions in Bill.
The bill provides further for the establishment and maintenance of an extension department in all the colleges of agriculture; outlines the duties, such as to give instruction and demonstrations in agriculture and home economics to persons not attending the agricultural college, by field demonstrations; provides that any money expended in any year shall be deducted from the appropriation for the succeeding year; provides for reports showing how the money has been used; provides that any federal money lost or misused must be made good by the State and prohibits the use of the money for any purpose not strictly within the act; provides for reports from the colleges to the secretary of agriculture and the secretary of the treasury; provides that the secretary of agriculture may withhold an appropriation from States not complying with the act, but that such States may appeal to congress from the secretary's decision.

"You will recall that some weeks ago cable news was received here that the Lever bill had passed congress. Inasmuch as the College of Hawaii, which is one of the 'state colleges' of agriculture and mechanic arts, is directly interested in the operation of the law, I addressed the following letter to the National Bureau of Education:

Asks for Particulars.
"Dear Sir:—We have recently received cable news that the Lever Agricultural Extension Bill has passed congress and soon is to become operative. We are naturally very much interested in this important legislation and wish to know specifically if the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts of the Territory of Hawaii is to benefit by this appropriation. The need for extension work in this Territory (which is an integral part of the United States and in no sense a 'possession') is very great indeed and we are endeavoring to develop this work, although upon the slenderest resources. I am sending you some literature descriptive of our extension work and would appreciate from you detailed information regarding the Lever bill and its applications. Respectfully yours, (Signed) 'O. A. KALBACH,' 'Chief Clerk.'"

PROF. VAUGHAN MACCAUGHY, In Charge of Extension Work.
"Under date of February 28 the following reply was received:
"Professor Vaughan MacCaughy: In reply to your letter of February twelfth, I beg to advise you that the Lever Bill has not yet become a law. It passed the house, was amended in the senate, and is now in conference. Inasmuch as the administration of that law will be with the department of agriculture, I am forwarding your letter to that department. Sincerely yours, (Signed) 'O. A. KALBACH,' 'Chief Clerk.'"

FORMER PRISON GUARD TO BE GIVEN HEARING

HILO, March 21.—At the request of Oliver Akau the prison guard whose commission was canceled on account of an alleged assault on a prisoner nine months ago, the prison inspectors of whom H. H. Renton of Kohala and Luther Arango of Kailua are two and Moses Malakana of Hilo the third are here for the purpose of making an investigation into the charges. The hearing will be at the jail on Saturday and the evidence of the prisoner taken. The man Akahi, who made the charge so long after the affair happened, was not a witness as he was off duty and in bed when the prisoner was placed in the dark cell. Another guard, who called upon for a statement by Sheriff Pua happened not to have been on duty at the jail until a month after the assault was said to have been made. Akau will be represented before the inspectors by Claudius McBryde. It is not believed that either Sheriff Pua or ex-Guard Akahi will be present.

JUDGE WILDER A CANDIDATE

Makes Formal Application for the Chairmanship of Public
Utilities Commission—Governor
Uses the Afternoon in Secusion, Figuring How to Make the Ends Meet.

(From Saturday Advertiser.)

Judge Arthur A. Wilder announced yesterday that he had made a formal application for the position of chairman of the public utilities commission, to become vacant when the resignation of E. A. Mott-Smith takes effect on April 1. Judge Wilder had a long conference with the Governor yesterday afternoon, at the expiration of which he announced that he was a candidate for the public utilities chairmanship. E. W. Outhart yesterday denied the report that he was a candidate for the position. "An entirely wrong construction has been placed on my visit to the Governor last Friday," said Mr. Outhart yesterday. "My visit to the Governor was nothing more or less than a friendly one. We discussed many subjects, but the subject of my candidacy for the position of chairman of the public utilities commission never came up. The Governor said nothing to me about it, and I said nothing to the Governor regarding it. Of course, if he had asked me to accept it I couldn't very well refuse and would probably have agreed to, but he didn't ask me."

Although all the government offices were closed yesterday and the Capitol was otherwise deserted by all with the exception of one or two janitors and watchmen, Governor Pinkham was in his office, with his door locked, engaged in working over a number of financial statements from various department heads. Governor Pinkham explained that he was taking advantage of the usual Saturday afternoon quiet to work out territorial policies based on a reduced income.

Isenberg for Mayor Appears the
One Best Bet at Present—
Some Hardy Perennials.

Candidates are early appearing upon the scene this election year, induced to sprout ahead of the usual season because of the new primary law and the uncertainty as to just what it may all work out to. The feeling among the rank and file of Democracy, which started in with uneasiness a few weeks ago and has almost arrived at the shrieking point, is also responsible for the forced growth of booms. The Democrats have not let their partisanship get below fever heat once since election night, as a matter of fact, and the fierce factionalism within the ranks has kept the minimum temperature high.

Republicans have been less eager to scrap among themselves in public, but this is not because there is not a seething below the surface nor because there is a dearth of ambitious ones ready to spring to the front. R. W. Shingle is prepared to run as the party's candidate for Delegate to Congress, if events properly shape themselves. Senator Rice is being urged again in some quarters as the logical candidate. Kuhio is having his friends send a few balloons to note the currents, and there are others. For Democracy, L. L. McCandless is still running, Mayor Fern is ready to listen to reason and lead his party, and Senator James Cooke has a few wires laid out, with others to hear from.

Question of Eligibility.
The friends of both Coke and Rice are only worrying over the recent decision from Washington that a hold-over senator is ineligible for appointment or election to any office in the Territory. Would election to congress be considered election to an office in the Territory? That is the point. If it is, Coke and Rice off the list of prospective candidates. If it is not, prepare to greet their names on the primary ballot.

Isenberg for Mayor.
There is plenty of willing Republican material for mayor of Honolulu, even if W. E. Farrington says he will not run. The most promising name, to date is that of D. P. H. Isenberg, ex-senator, ex-chairman of the board of agriculture and forestry and leading citizen. Mr. Isenberg has practically offered himself as a candidate and should receive plenty of encouragement in his political ambition. He is one of whom it cannot be said that he is after the job for the salary that is in it, and his name at the head of a city ticket would give it character and strength.

Senator Charley Chillingworth is mentioned by his friends as a probable candidate, something which he neither denies nor admits. He would make a strong race and, if elected, bring a heap of experience to the mayor's office.

Judge Archie Mahula is also spoken of as a strong candidate. He is one of the best known Hawaiians of the island outside of the city, but is not as well known today to the majority of voters as was the case a few years ago, the voting population having materially changed, especially in the fourth district. Mr. Mahula would be a creditable candidate, however, and should be land the nomination would command support.

Willing to Try Again.
John Lane, who made two desperate attempts to capture the plum, is willing to be persuaded to try a third time, and, of course, Charley Hustace still has the habit of trying to land the nomination and the prize. Hustace was an independent last time, but will probably be back in the G. O. P. ranks as a regular this election. He left the party as a protest against convention methods, which no longer prevail. He wants to be mayor now just as much as he ever did.

The impression is growing among Re-
